

Distinguished Lecture on "Latest Findings and Policies in China on Climate Change - Challenges and Opportunities" 『中國氣候改變最新情況及政策和措施 – 挑戰與機遇』講座

Scientific evidence shows that human-induced climate change has taken place for years due to excessive anthropogenic activities. The broad-reaching effects of climate change are becoming more apparent to all people in their daily lives. China commits to combat on climate change as one of the national agenda, and publishes the White Paper "China's Policies and Actions for Addressing Climate Change" in 2008; and re-affirms its ambitious targets in the 12th Five-year Plan (Chapter 21) so as to reduce the GHG emission; enhancing scientific researches; and promoting inter-governmental cooperation. The UNFCCC and Kyoto Protocol have been extended to Hong Kong since 2003, and the Government has put forward its mitigation actions in different perspectives. The recent legislation on Building Energy Efficiency and the public consultation on the Hong Kong Climate Change Strategy Action and Agenda in December 2010 indicate the commitment of the Hong Kong Government in combating climate change.

To help professionals and general public understand the scientific basis and impacts of climate change, and prepare themselves for the challenges and opportunities for a low carbon economy, Hong Kong Climate Change Forum (HKCCF) is organizing a half-day forum sharing sectoral perspectives amongst academics and scientists, government officials and business/trade representatives.
